SELECTING A POSTMASTER

To persons who are interested only as observers of the contest for the postmaster of Connelville, and perhaps to some of the applicants also, there will be a disposition to regard the policy adopted in Washington with respect to the selection of the applicants as a just and fair method of making the choice.

So long as the executive order placing postmasters under the civil service remains in force it would seem that no other method of determining the appointee could be employed. True, this order was handed down by the preceding administration after it had used about all the available material in the ranks of "Deserving Democrats" out of which to make postmasters, and the good faith of the order was very seriously questioned at the time as having been issued for the purpose of barring Republicans rather than with the expectation that enough unplaced Democrats had been left to form a class for examination under civil service rules.

Permitting the order to remain in force will not give satisfaction to such reflections under the present administration but it will create a most perpetuating problem to the Civil Service Commission. There are so many worthy and deserving Republicans all qualified to fill such posts that the commission is certain to have its ability to calculate minute differences in percentages attained on examination put to a severe test that, after all the choice will have to be made by lot.

FOR A GENERAL HOSPITAL

While the mayor made a very happy choice in designating Mrs. Howard H.
Myers of the Women's Culture Club as chairman of a committee to inquire into the steps necessary to be taken to inaugurate a movement having the establishment of a general hospital as its object, the fact was doubtless overlooked that a hospital association has already been created in the city. Several years ago a very enthusiastic meeting at the Red Cross work room resulted in the organization of a body for this same purpose.

It may be that it has expired from inactivity but certain progress was made in the direction of inquiring into the situation with a view to determining what procedure should be taken to give the project form and effect.
The ability of the Women's Culture Club to carry its project to completion is not called into question, but the suggestion may at this time be pertinent that the representatives of this organization might find it profitable and a saving of time as well to confer with the persons identified with the earlier movement. If it is in such shape that it can be revived or given new life and stimulated to activity by the efficient aid of the ladies, it would seem preferable to a duplication of efforts might result from independent action of the culture club.

There is a complete unanimity of opinion as to the need of a general hospital and a feeling that something should be done to get the project under way. It is possible that a conference, such as has been suggested, might result in giving the movement the needed stimulus and result in the culture club being made the instrument as Councilman Hiss suggests, of developing a strong association which would insure the ultimate success of the undertaking.

MORE PLAYGROUNDS

In view of the offer of the Women's Culture Club to finance the supervision of the playgrounds during the summer period, to the extent of $2,500, the city council can very properly consider that it has much the better end of the bargain in providing $1,000 with which to provide equipment.

While the experience of last year was not all that might have been desired, it did demonstrate the utility and desirability of the playground as a means of furnishing diversion for the children of the city who heretofore have had no place except the streets in which to indulge in the sports and games of childhood, provided adequate supervision is at all times supplied.
With three additional playgrounds to be established and equipped, and a better system of supervision than prevailed last year, the playgrounds which in different sections of the city will afford a larger number of children opportunities to derive benefit therefrom and at the same time enable a larger number of grown-ups to observe how much better it is for children to have their play periods supervised and directed than to have them running at large on the streets.

Existence for the interest, energy and persistence of the ladies of the Women's Culture Club, the playground would not have been established in Connelville for years to come. Having entered into the enlargement of the first year's experiment with so much determination, and volunteered to assume the burden of maintenance which is practically three times what the cost of the equipment will be, the club is entitled to recognition, encouragement and appreciation for the fine public spirit it has displayed.

These can be shown in a substantial and practical form by providing the equipment necessary for the three additional playgrounds, which the city council has very promptly and quite commendably shown its willingness to do.

The postponement of the trial of J.
V. Thompson has evidently become a regular part of the proceedings of the United States Court.

To Advertise and
Stop Is Fatal

Geyer's Stationer

One of the saddest spectacles ob-servable in American business life at the present time is offered by those merchants and manufacturers who have been so impressed by the existing state of economy that they are cutting down on their advertising.
The buying public of today is very much different from the buying public of two centuries ago, and what is more to the point, even of two decades ago. The modern public has been brought up on advertisements. The infant food it imbibes from its nursing bottle, the shoes it wears out on its reluctant walks to school, the ring it slides upon its beloved finger as a token of the happy date of acceptance, the baby carriage it later invests in, even the ornate box in which it is at last, laid to rest, and the enduring stone that marks the spot where all bought because they have been advertised. What is not advertised is ignored as if it did not exist.

Yes, it is better never to advertise at all than to advertise and then to stop.
That is fatal—perhaps not at once, but eventually. It is taken as a confession of failure. People interpret it as meaning that the goods of the man who ceases to advertise have been tested in the great laboratory of public opinion and have been found wanting. It is as if he had his wares spread out in his store for examination and comparison, and should then, suddenly, board up the windows. People view such action with suspicion.

An advertising appropriation should be a permanent charge, no more subject to arbitrary cancellation than the dealer's charge for shop rent or light.
It can be made a far more profitable investment than the money spent for rent and light. Why it should so often be among the first expenses to be cut down when the pining of economy is heard in the land will always be incomprehensible to anybody of ordinary intelligence.

Advertising extends the personality of the dealer and the manufacturer far out from the counter, the shop and the factory. It carries sales talks to hundreds and thousands, instead of keeping it confined to scores. It spreads the dealer's shop window and the manufacturer's show-room before whole communities instead of merely before those few persons who happen to pass.

At no time is a continuance of advertising more imperative than when general economic conditions tend to be depressed. It is then that the buying public is most tempted to change its buying habits, and needs but little impetus to cause it to desert one dealer for another. It is then that the business weaklings pull in their lines of communication with the public, leaving the field to the courageous and the far-sighted who know that in a country like ours economic depression can only be a temporary thing, like a summer cloud speeding across the face of the sun.

Anyone can make hay while the sun shines. The greatest rewards in life go to him who continues his plans for making money even when the sun is a bit obscured.

The Other View

Maybe after all we worry too much about boys who quit the farm. Think what would happen to dad if they stayed with him and were no more account in the country than some of them are in town.

Just Folks

Edgar A. Gussel

THE EVENING WELCOME

There's a certain thrill of pleasure in a battle fought and won.
And it's good to hear men cheering for a contemplated thing you've done.
There's a satisfaction when a business deal you've made
And there's a pride in counting up the profit that is paid.
But the thrill that goes the deepest and is laden with delight,
Is the welcome of your own folks
when you're getting home at night.
Out beyond the home is laughter of a certain sort, I know.
And it's good to have the friendship of the men who come and go.
It's good to win their welcome and it's fine to have them cheer.
But they cannot fill the places of the children waiting near.
And the sweetest satisfaction, when all plans have taken flight,
Is the welcome of your own folks
when you're getting home at night.
Just to have them glad to see you—that's the answer to it all—Glad to see you coming, homeward when the shades of evening fall.
Fond of you, whatever happens, proud to spend their lives with you, Never thinking of your failures, pleased with everything you do.
I don't know how to say it, but there's a welcome that's more valuable than that of the world,
When you're getting home at night.

THE PETITE ROBE

Parisian Garment Has Lost Nothing of Its Prestige.

Trifle Less Diversified in Style—Adheres Mostly to One Straight, Uncompromising Line.

The petite robe, that loveliest of all Parisian achievements, has lost nothing of its prestige during this spring season. It is, perhaps, a trifle less diversified in style than it once was, but though it adheres mostly to one straight and uncompromising line, it is none the less developed in a thousand different ways, each more perfect than before. In the subtleties of these developments, there lies a deal of charm—that seems impossible to imitate.

Most of the daytime dresses, if the collections are viewed as a whole, are made from very fine serge or from one of the many varieties of crepe de chine. More often the frocks of dark blue serge, for this is a material of never-ending popularity with the Parisienne, are trimmed with some shade of red applied in more or less intricate ways. But with the blue serge the red almost as a matter of course.

The combination of red and blue is used by Paris many times over, and on most of the daytime frocks he is making a point of the longer skirt which reaches below the ankles.

Dovetail shows an adaptation of the Brittany costumes, which has had all sorts of interested attention in Paris. It is the prettiest combination of blue serge with red trimmings. Another frock which appeared at the opening of this season was made up of two panels of red tulle, one at front and one at back, and each of these was embroidered in an all-over pattern with dark blue threads. The remaining portions of the dress, that is, the full skirt and sleeves, were of blue serge, to carry out this over-prevalent style of red and blue.

In the same style one sees among the collection of Madeline et Armand a red and blue dress called Marmouset. Madeline et Madeline have a red and blue frock, very simple and chaste in line. It is built about a high belt of red tulle lace, around which all the interior centers. The skirt is full and the bodice slightly flared. At this most popular of designers the afternoon gown of silk and crepe are very apt to show the subtle art in every way so that another and a lighter shade appears between the afternoon and more often than not adorned with embroidery of different sorts. Madeline et Armand shows a street frock in dark blue serge which has a wide, draped belt of brightly glistening red leather.

TRY MAGNESIA FOR STOMACH TROUBLE

It Neutralizes Stomach Acidity, Prevents Food Fermentation, Bloats, Gassy Stomach and Acid Indigestion.

Doubtless if you are suffering from indigestion, you have already tried many patent medicines, and various remedies, and you know these things will not cure your trouble. In some cases, however, you give relief.

But before giving up hope and despairing, you are a "strong" dyspeptic. Just try the effect of E. W. Roes' Bismarck Magnesia. It is a natural, non-toxic, chemical carbonate, orate, or milk, but the pure Bismarck Magnesia which you can obtain from practically any drug store in either powder or tablet form.

Take a teaspoonful of the powder or two compressed tablets with a little water after each meal, and see what a difference this makes. It will instantly neutralize the dangerous, harmful acid in the stomach which now causes your food to ferment and move, making gas, flatulency, heartburn and the bloated, or heavy, lumpy, feeling that seems to follow most everything you eat.

You will find that provided you take a little Bismarck Magnesia immediately after a meal, you can eat almost anything and enjoy it without any danger of pain or discomfort to follow and moreover, the continued use of the Bismarck Magnesia cannot injure the stomach in any way so long as there are any symptoms of acid indigestion.

WHAT A TONIC DOES FOR YOU

AND WHY YOU NEED IT IN SO MANY INSTANCES WHEN YOU ARE RUN DOWN, NERVOUS OR HAVE HAD TO ENDURE GREAT STRAIN OR WORRY OF ANY KIND.

A tonic is something which puts tone, energy, strength and endurance into you. It gives a push to your heart, making it pump the blood over your body more vigorously. It makes your lungs expand more fully and thereby take up more strength-giving oxygen from the air you breathe. It makes your kidneys work better and carry off the poisons which would otherwise accumulate in the body. It makes your digestive apparatus perform its work better and give your blood the material it needs for rebuilding and sustaining your body. It makes your brain act more vigorously and enables you to think more accurately and for long periods without fatigue, thus bringing you greater success in whatever business, profession or undertaking you are engaged.

When you are run down, nervous, half sick, downhearted and about ready to give up, experience of many years has shown that one of the best remedies to pull you out of this bad predicament is good old organolein. But be sure the organolein you take is genuine. The kind that is found in plants and not metallic iron which people usually take. Organolein may be had from your druggist under the name of Nourished Iron. It often increases the strength, energy and endurance of weak, nervous, tired old folks in two weeks time. Beware of substitutes. Always look for the word "Nourished" on every package and the letters M. L. on every bottle. Sold by all druggists.

Quartermaster Corps of Army Cuts Expenses

Special in The Courier.

WASHINGTON, April 27.—In line with the policy of rigid economy laid down by Congress, the War Department has announced today that the Quartermaster Corps of the Army since January 1 last with more than usual diligence. It was announced today at the quartermaster general's office that nearly $3,000,000 in salaries will have been saved to the taxpayers by June 30, or at the rate of about $6,000,000 a year.

For the first three months of this year, 3,558 "civilian" employees have been separated from the Quartermaster Corps, and the approximate amount of savings in salaries up to June 30 will be $2,775,000. In addition 4,145 employees have been demoted in the different corps areas and depots, with a saving of $154,323.90.

Since February, 1919, more than 80,000 civilians have been discharged by the Quartermaster Corps, and this branch of the Army is on a new peacetime footing. The 493 different kinds of civilian positions in the corps are to be consolidated into 125, and the same job will no longer have two or more different names. None of these wholesale reductions will in any way impair the efficiency of the supply service of the Army.

BRACELETS STILL IN FAVOR

Arm Decorations Are Often of Combinations of Ivory and Tortoise Shell.

Bracelets are still in high favor with the fashionably attired woman. Many are worn together, but they need not be of the same material or enriched with similar designs. When ivory is used on one arm, the other often has a combination of ivory, tortoise shell and one of tortoise shell is noted.

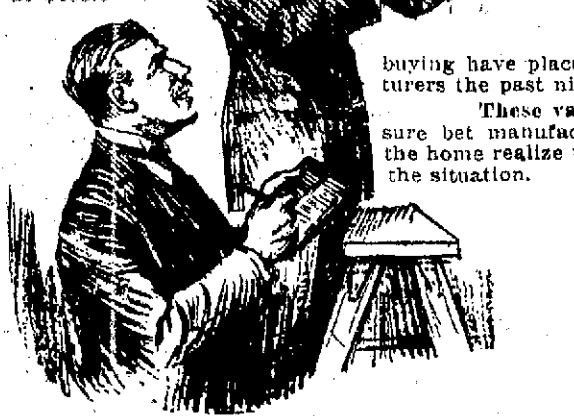

Another type of bracelet is that made of tiny beads strung on a small chain. Such bracelets may be of great length, for they are wound around the arm a number of times and fastened at the wrist.

True Trachoma Easily Transmitted.
At a recent meeting of the American Medical Association, Dr. John McMillan, surgeon, U. S. Public Health Service, started a lively debate in the section on preventive medicine by reading a paper in which he asserted that much of the so-called trachoma which afflicted the eyes of American children is not trachoma and not contagious.

The original cause of this inflammation of the eyelids is unknown, but it is known with certainty that it is transmitted with ease from one eye to another. There is another type, called folliculitis, which is not contagious and can easily be cured, while the true trachoma necessitates a slight surgical operation and careful treatment; and even with this, it is by no means certain that it is ever permanently cured.

Elevated to Bishopric.
Seldom has there been discovered a more clever and effective device for spreading the gospel than that suggested by wise old Bishop Amos of America. He evolved a scheme which promised the making of the church with the powerful state.

Catching Governor Germans in church one day, the bishop slipped up behind that official. A pass with one hand and he had snipped off the gubernatorial leader's hair with the other hand, and a bishop's robe was slipped over the tattered den. Before the governor could say the American equivalent for "Jack Robinson," he was informed that the Bishop Amos had resigned and that he was ordained in his stead.

Druggists and Doctors Astonished At Wonderful Power of Nicotol To Stop the Use of Tobacco

To Detect Harmful Effects of Tobacco
Try These Simple Tests

New York.—Mr. Tobacco user, any druggist will tell you that a remedy to be successfully sold must have every thing, tobacco excepted, otherwise failure is inevitable. Nicotol, the famous remedy for the tobacco habit, was a success right from the start, simply because it quickly does the work promised. We publish a few letters from some of the best known druggists in the country to give you an idea of what they think of Nicotol, and you may rest assured that they would not permit the use of their names unless Nicotol was something out of the ordinary. The Peoples Drug Stores have one of the best drug stores in Washington, D. C. They write: "Since we have handled Nicotol, the sale has been greater than that of all the rest of the articles of this nature which we have ever sold. The demand was so great that we were compelled to order it directly from the manufacturer. Our first order was placed for 100 boxes. We have since ordered a very large quantity and it has given us entire satisfaction to our customers. Jacob Brothers of Philadelphia, Pa., have this to say: "Our sale of Nicotol has far exceeded our expectations. Our first order was placed for 100 boxes. We were forced to order before the end of April; the sales have kept up all year since. There is no doubt that we are receiving many repeat orders from our customers and many expressions of opinion regarding the merit of this article have been very favorable." Dr. Connor, formerly of Johns Hopkins Hospital, tells how to detect the harmful effects of tobacco. Here is what he says: "Many men who smoke, chew or snuff incessantly and who are seemingly healthy are suffering from progressive organic ailments. Thousands of them would never have been affected had it not been for the use of tobacco to excess and thousands would soon get well if they would stop. The chief habit-forming principle of tobacco is nicotine, a deadly poison which when absorbed by the system, slowly affects the nerves, membranes, tissues and vital organs of the body. The harmful effect of tobacco varies and depends on circumstances. One will be afflicted with general debility, others with catarrh of the throat, indigestion, constipation, extreme nervousness, sleeplessness, loss of memory, lack of will power, mental confusion, etc. Others may suffer from heart disease, bronchial trouble, hardening of the arteries, tuberculosis, blindness or even cancer of the common infiltration known as tobacco heart. If you use tobacco to excess in any form you can easily detect the harmful effects by making the following simple tests: Read aloud one full page from a book in the course of reading your voice becomes muffled, hoarse and indistinct and you must frequently clear your throat. The chances are that your throat is affected by catarrh and it may be the beginning of more serious trouble.

Next in the morning before taking your usual smoke, walk up three flights of stairs at a regular pace, then stop. If you find that you are out of breath, your heart bent in forced, trembling or irregular, you may be a victim of functional or organic heart trouble. If you feel that you must smoke, chew or snuff to quiet your nerves you are a slave to the tobacco habit and are positively poisoning yourself with the deadly drug, nicotine. In either case you have just two alternatives—keep on with the self poisoning process irrespective of the dangers and suffer the consequence or give up the habit and escape the dangers. You can overcome the craving and stop the habit in a very short time by using the following inexpensive formula. Go to any drug store and ask for Nicotol tablets. Take one tablet after each meal, and in a comparatively short time you will have no desire for tobacco—the craving will have left you. With the nicotine poison out of your system, your general health will quickly improve.

Note.—When asked about Nicotol tablets one of our leading druggists said: "It is truly a wonderful remedy for the tobacco habit; away ahead of anything we have ever sold before. We are authorized by the manufacturer to refund the money to every dissatisfied customer, and we would not permit the use of our name unless the remedy possessed unusual merit." Nicotol tablets are sold in this city under an iron-clad money-back guarantee by all up-to-date druggists, including J. C. Moore.—Adv.

EXPLOSION IN SECOND POT

Repairs Are Made to This and Operations Are Resumed; Women of Re-Union Church Are Bled by Men as Result of Latter Losing Control.

Special to The Courier.

MOUNT PLEASANT, April 27.—On Monday the jinx camped near the plant of the J. E. Smith Glass company. The 80-ton pot burst out and gave way, pouring hot glass over the factory. Three streams of water were played on the hot fluid. A second tank that had just been repaired was put in use and for some unknown reason an explosion occurred in this tank. The second tank, however, was repaired and the men were put to work again.

Men Enter into Women.

The women of the Re-Union Presbyterian Sunday school were royally entertained by the men of the Sunday school last evening in the lecture rooms as a result of a contest that has been conducted for three months, in which the women of the school had a lead of 44 in attendance over the men. One hundred and fifty-five persons were in attendance last evening. The rooms were beautifully decorated in spring flowers. The committee on entertainment was composed of Dr. W. A. Marsh, William Grimm and J. K. Given, superintendent of the school. On the refreshments committee were J. P. Workman, C. M. Rhodes, W. D. Spookman, B. A. Lemmon and D. H. Stoner. The program follows: Orchestra selection; reading, "Not Guilty," Patsy Lemmon; vocal solo, Miss Elizabeth Ramsay; violin solo, Prof. Andrew Schwartz; lantern slides, views of the western part of the United States and Niagara; diet, Mrs. Presley Hurst and Mrs. Frank Cooper; reading, Stewart Dillon; violin solo, Prof. Schwartz; orchestra selection.

J. O. C. Sued.

The J. O. C. class of the Methodist Episcopal church held a social in the Sunday school rooms of the church last evening. Following the business meeting very nice refreshments were served.

Farmers Convinced of Value Of Spraying in Spud Farming

Farmers of Fayette county and all over Pennsylvania have been convinced that potato spraying and seed selection pays, and we look for improved methods on upwards of twenty thousand acres this year. As against six thousand acres last year. Prof. E. L. Nixon, extension agent, yesterday at the Pennsylvania State fair, where three years ago he held a potato seed improvement contest, made a speech on the value of spraying and seed selection. He said that in Fayette county alone the yield of potatoes had increased from 100 bushels per acre to 150 bushels per acre. He said that in Fayette county alone the yield of potatoes had increased from 100 bushels per acre to 150 bushels per acre. increase through improved methods. These results have convinced growers in two ways that are apparent at the present time: There will be a continuance of spraying demonstrations, over 200 being arranged for at this time, in 65 counties, which will cover 1,500 acres. Seventy-five thousand bushels of disease-free seed have been secured through State college and county agents and will be planted this season, and a great increase in yield is expected from them. During the growing season over 250 "better seed" meetings will be held in 60 counties.

The Adventures of A Demobilized Officer Who Found Peace Dull

"To resume," continued Hugh, "I regret to state that they got Potts. The girl sat up quickly and started at him. 'Oh, Hugh! how did they manage it?' 'I'm d— if I know,' he answered grimly. 'They found out that he was in my bungalow at Goring during the afternoon by sending round a man to see about the water. Somehow or other he must have doped the drink or the food, because after dinner I fell asleep. I don't remember anything more till I woke this morning with the most appalling head. Of course, Potts had gone.'"

"I heard the car drive up in the middle of the night," said the girl thoughtfully. "Do you think he's at the Elms now?"

"That is what I propose to find out tonight," answered Hugh. "We have staged a little comedy for Potts' special benefit, and we are hoping for the best."

"Oh, boy, do be careful!" She looked at him anxiously. "I'd never forgive myself if anything happened to you. I feel it was all due to me, and I just couldn't bear it."

"Dear little girl," he whispered tenderly. "You're simply adorable when you look like that. But not even for you would I back out of this show now." His mouth set in a grim line. "It's gone altogether too far, and they've shown themselves to be so completely beyond the pale that it's got to be fought out. And when it has been," he caught both her hands in his and whispered, "and we've won."

"Why then, girl of mine, will you get Peter Darrell to be best man?"

"Which was the cue for the commencement of the last and loudest interlude, terminated only by the sudden and unwelcome appearance of a motor-bus covered within and without by unbecoming sightseers, and paper-bags containing bananas."

They drove slowly back to Goring, and on the way he told her briefly of the murder of the American's secretary in Belfast, and his interview the preceding afternoon with the impostor at the Carlton.

"It's a tough proposition," he remarked quietly. "They're absolutely without scruple, and their power seems unlimited. I know they are after the duchess of Lampshire's pearls. I found the hereditary jewels consigned yesterday to young Lady yesterday—you know, the duke's eldest son. But there's something more in the wind than that. Phyllis—some thing which, unless I'm a mug of the first water, is an infinitely larger proposition than that."

The car drew up at the station, and he sprang with her to the platform. Then the train came in, and he pushed her into a carriage. And two minutes later, with the touch of her lips warm on his, and her anxious little cry, "Take care, my darling!"—she came rattling to his man, he got into his car and drove off to an hotel to get an early dinner.

FOUR

At a quarter to ten he backed his car into the shadow of some trees not far from the gate of The Elms. He switched on the lights, and one in a bedroom upstairs, the front of the house was in darkness, and, breathing noisily on the turf, he explored all round it. There was one bedroom light at the back of the house, and thrown on the blind he could see the shadow of a man. As he watched, the man got up and moved away, only to return in a moment or two and take up his old position.

"One of those two bedrooms," he muttered to himself. "If he's here at all."

Then he crept to the shadow of some shrubs and waited. Through the trees to his right he could see The Elms, and once with a sudden quaking of his heart, he thought he was the shadow of the ghost who was in the light from the drawing-room. But it was only for a second, and then it was gone.

He peered at his watch: it was just ten o'clock. The trees were creaking gently in the night wind, all around him the strange night noises—noises which play pranks with a man's nerves—were whispering and muttering. Bristles seemed suddenly to come to life, and move: eerie shapes crawled over the ground toward him—figures which existed only in his imagination. And once again the thrill of the night stalker gripped him.

He remembered the German who had late motionless for an hour in a little gully by Hebuterne, while he from behind a stunted bush had tried to locate him. And then that one creak as the Boche had moved his leg. And then—the end. On that night, too, the little hummocks had moved, and taken to themselves strange shapes. After times he had imagined he saw him; fifty times he knew he was wrong—in time. He was used to it; the night held no terrors for him, only a fierce excitement. And thus it was that as he crouched in the bushes, waiting for the game to start, his pulse was as normal, and his nerves as steady as if he had been sitting down to supper.

The only difference was that in his hand he held something tight-gripped. At last faintly in the distance he heard the hum of a car. Rapidly it grew louder, and he smiled grimly to himself as the sound of five unmelodious voices slugging lustily struck his ear. They passed along the road in front of the house. There was a sudden crash—then silence; but only for a moment.

Peter's voice came first: "You precious old man, you've rammed the blinking gate."

It was Jerry Seymour who then took up the bowl. His voice was intensely solemn—also extremely loud. "Preposterous. Perfectly preposterous. We must go and apologize to the owner."

"Quite unpardonable. . . . You can't go about country knocking down gates. . . . Out of question."

Half-consciously Hugh listened, but now that the moment for action had come, every faculty was concentrated on his own job. He saw half a dozen men go rushing out into the garden through a side door, and then two more ran out and came straight toward him. They crashed past him and went on into the darkness, and for an instant he wondered what they were doing. A little later he was destined to find out.

Then came a peal at the front-door bell, and he determined to wait no longer. He darted through the garden door, to find a sight of stairs in front of him, and in another moment he was on the first floor. He walked rapidly along the landing, trying to find his bearings, and, turning a corner, he found himself at the top of the main staircase—the spot where he had fought Peterson two nights previously.

He walked quickly on to the room which he calculated was the one where he had seen the shadow on the blind. Without a second's hesitation he flung the door open and walked in. There lying in the bed, was the American, white-clothed beside him, with a revolver in his hand, was a man.

For a few seconds they watched one another in silence, and then the man straightened up. "The fellow I—be started: 'You young pup?'"

"Deliberately, almost casually, he raised his revolver, and then the unexpected happened. A jet of liquid ammonia struck him full in the face, and with a short laugh Hugh dropped his water pistol in his pocket, and turned his attention to the bed. Wrapping the millionaire in a blanket, he picked him up, and, paying no more attention to the man gasping and choking in a corner, he raced for the back stairs.

Below he could hear Jerry hissing gently, and explaining to the police. He pre-arranged that he was on his way to the hospital, and every gate post he passed. And then he reached the garden.

Everything had fallen out exactly as he had hoped, but had hardly dared to expect. He heard Peterson's voice, Larches, with his semi-conscious burden, get to his car, and drive off. It all seemed so easy that he laughed.

But there were one or two factors which he had forgotten, and the first and most important one was the man upstairs. The window was thrown up suddenly, and the man leaned out waving his arms. He was still gasping with the strength of the ammonia, but Hugh saw him clearly to the light from the room behind. And as he cursed himself for a fool in not having tied him up, from the trees close by there came the sharp clasp of metal.

With a quick catch in his breath he began to run. The two men who had rushed past him before he had entered the house, and whom, save for a passing thought, he had disregarded, had become the principal danger. For he had heard that clasp before, he remembered Jean Solis's white horror-struck face, and then his sigh of relief as the thing whatever it was—was shut in its cage. And now it was out, dodging through the trees, let loose by the two men. He heard something crash into a bush on his right, and give a snarl of anger. Like a flash he was over into the underground on the left.

Then began a dreadful game. He was still some way from the fence, and he was hampered at every step by the men stung over his back. He could hear the thing blundering about searching for him, and suddenly, with a cold feeling of fear, he realized that the animal was in front of him—that his way to the gate was barred. The next moment he saw it.

Shadowy, indistinct, in the darkness, he saw something glide between two bushes. Then it came out into the open, and he knew it had seen him, though as yet he could not make out what it was.

Cautiously he lowered the millionaire to the ground and took a step forward. It was enough; with a snarl of fury the crouching form leaped toward him. Two hairy arms shot out toward his throat, he snatched the brute's foetid breath, hot and toothsome, and he realized what he was up against. It was a partially grown gorilla.

For a full minute they fought in silence, save for the hoarse grunts of the animal as it tried to tear away the man's head from its throat, and then, encircling him, with its powerful arms, and with his brain cold as ice Hugh saw his finger and kept his head. It couldn't go on; no human being could last the pace, whatever his strength. And there was only one chance of finishing it quickly, the possibility that the grip taught him by Olad would serve with a monkey as it did with a man.

He shifted his left thumb as luck or two on the brute's throat, and the baboon, thinking he was weakening, redoubled his efforts. And then, little by little, the fingers closed, and the grip which had been tight before grew tighter still. Back went the head: something was snapping in its neck. With a scream of fear and rage it wrapped its legs round Drummond, squeezing and writhing. And then suddenly there was a tearing snap, and the great limbs relaxed and grew limp.

For a moment the man stood watching the still quivering brute lying at his feet; then, with a gasp of utter exhaustion, he dropped on the ground himself. He was done—utterly cooked; even Peterson's voice close behind scarcely roused him.

"Quite one of the most amusing entertainments I've seen for a long time," the calm, expressionless voice roared him back up, and he saw that he was surrounded by men. The inevitable clear gloved rod in the darkness, and after a moment or two he scrambled unsteadily to his feet.

"I'd forgotten your d—d menagerie. I must frankly confess," he remarked. "What's the party for?" He glanced at the men who had closed in round him.

"A guard of honor," one young friend, said Peterson solemnly. "To lead you to the home. I wouldn't hesitate to say it's very foolish. Your friends have gone, and, strong as you are, I don't think you can manage too."

Hugh commenced to stroll toward the house.

"Well, don't leave the wretched Potts lying about. I dropped him over there."

SHELLA HAUSER ELECTED FIELD MANAGER OF COKER INDEPENDENTS THIS YEAR

Plans for Grandstand Submitted to Engineer; May Begin Work This Week.

TROTTER LOSES OPENER

The first move has been made by the Connellsville Independents in getting ready for the opening game on May 21. The board of directors of the club voted to make Shella Hauser of this city field manager of the outfit in securing the old veteran a suitable more was made, as Hauser undoubtedly knows more about inside baseball than many of the present day managers holding down jobs with larger teams. The duties of the "old head," as he is known to his intimates, is to coach the players to improve their playing, but more important than all, teach them real inside baseball by using a set of signals for every play. This important detail was never in vogue last season, was really responsible for the few games the Independents lost. Hauser's acceptance is being awaited.

Dr. C.W. Utts, president of the club, will consult an engineer today and impart to him his ideas for the grandstand. Dr. Utts plans to erect a stand with a seating capacity of about 500 persons, located directly in the corner of Fayette field, back of the home plate of last year. A run-way will be made under the stand so that automobiles may pass under to park down the first-base line. The lower part of the stand will be fitted with two large dressing rooms, with shower baths, one for the visiting teams and the other for the locals. Should enough money be subscribed, the doctor will have a tier of boxes built atop the roof. The erection of the grandstand and replacing the bleachers of last year will be started this week.

While no names of players are available, it is known some of the stars from last year have been secured and others whose names were announced will be a revelation to local fans as being angled for. No team has been booked for the opening attraction, but the fans are assured it will be in keeping with the grand opening day.

The Trotter baseball team lost its opening game yesterday when Colonial No. 3 was played, at that place, the score being 5-4. The game was called in the seventh inning on account of darkness. Trotter will open at home tomorrow, playing the same team.

A Frazier was on the mound for Trotter. He allowed seven hits, thirteen runs, four earned runs, three hits, and two errors. Trotter batters touched him for seven safeties. The score by innings follows:

Trotter 101 110 0-4
Colonial No. 3 112 010 X-5

The West Side Tigers defeated the last End Lone Scouts Monday night by a score of 22-1. The Tigers play Trotter tonight on the West Side "Y" diamond.

Lawrence King's South Side Pirates overcame Joe May's Giants yesterday afternoon. The score was 18-2.

BRAKEMAN ZIMMER HAD CLOSE CALL

"I Don't Believe I Would Be Here If It Wasn't for 'Panac,'" Says Erie Man.

Charles H. Zimmer, 11 West 19th street, Erie, Pa., is still another victim of the World War who has cause to be glad that he was induced to give Tanlac an honest trial. Mr. Zimmer is now a well-known brakeman on the New York Central, running between Erie and Cleveland.

"Honestly, I don't believe I would be here now if it hadn't been for Tanlac," said Mr. Zimmer. "Ever since I came home from overseas, after serving for 13 months with the 38th Infantry, I have been in a terribly run-down condition. While in the trenches over there I was gassed and shell-shocked and it left my stomach and nervous system in an awful condition. My appetite was very poor, what little I forced down just would not agree or digest properly and I suffered about as much from this indigestion as I did from the gas and shells. I often thought my time had surely come. My liver and kidneys bothered me and, although I tried to work, my back hurt so bad at times I could hardly get on and off of the train. My nerves were so unstrung and I suffered so I seldom got any sleep and always felt tired and worn out."

"Well, as nothing helped me I was almost in despair and hardly knew what to do, when I finally got Tanlac. I have used three bottles now, and have improved so much the boys on the road hardly know me. My stomach is in first-class condition, and, in fact, all my troubles are entirely gone so that I feel just fine. No matter how hard I work I always feel good and Tanlac sets all the credit for my good health."—Adv.

To the motorist who has quit guessing about tires —

ALONG about this time of year a man finds his motoring neighbors getting anxious about their tires. With folks expecting old tires to "pop" any minute, there comes the question of what kind of new ones to buy.

U. S. Tires are answering a lot of questions like this nowadays.

The U. S. Tire following embraces two kinds of tire buyers.

Those who started with quality first, and have never bought anything else but the quality standard tire.

Those who came to quality first only after dabbling with "bargains," "rebates," "job lot" and "surplus stock" tires.

Getting one hundred cents value on the dollar in tire buying is a straight-forward business proposition—not guess-work or a game of wits.

The most essential man for you to know today is the local U. S. Tire dealer who is concentrating on a full, completely sized line of U. S. Tires.

He gets his U. S. Tires straight from his neighboring U. S. Tire Factory Branch—one of 92 such Branches established and maintained all over the country by the U. S. Tire makers.

He is the man who can give you fresh, live tires—not stuff shipped to him from some point where it did not sell, but new tires of current production.

Giving the same quality, selection and price-advantage to the owner of the medium weight car as the big car owner gets. With equal service and buying opportunity whether he lives in the smaller localities or the greater centers of population.

THE U. S. NOBBY TREAD

Where the going is especially heavy with snow, mud or sand, in hilly country where maximum traction on the road is a factor, no other tire tread yet devised is quite so effective, or so wholly approved by motoring opinion, as the U. S. Nobby Tread.

Its very simplicity—two diagonal rows of oblong studs, interlocking in their grip on the road—is the result of all the years of U. S. Rubber experience with every type of road the world over.

"The most essential man for you to know today in the tire business is your local U. S. Tire Dealer."
